

Maker Library

Gibson-Graham, J. K.
A Postcapitalist Society.
University of Minnesota Press,
2006.

"Read this book and, at once, you will realise that there is an alternative to capitalism. In fact, there are multiple alternatives and many already exist all around us. Feminist economist J.K. Gibson-Graham takes the stigma out of trying to imagine, and to talk about a world after or outside, of capitalism. This is the second of three books. The first, The End of Capitalism... from 1996, sets up the problem of the capitalist economy and the activist urge to combat it. This volume elaborates the results of a decade's activist scholarship and a new climate in which noncapitalism increasingly starts to affirm itself; and the most recent book, Take Back the Economy, 2013, is a practical how-to guide to leave capitalist structures and build noncapitalist alternatives."

Jonnet Middleton
Featured Librarian
December